How does Marlow's inner perspective come into dialog with the darkness along his journey?

Begin here:

1.2 | Jack's Intro

- This asks two questions. What does Marlow's language reveal to us about his journey and how, ultimately, does his internalities reveals
- Can we look beyond his perspective of the darkness?
- "The earth seemed unearthly" quote. It seems like he is describing Earth as he sees it, but how much of it is Marlow thinking its dark and how much of it is actually dark

Two stances: Marlow Brings Darkness, or Darkness Darkens Marlow

...arguments, arguments, arguments...

both! It's a greesy cycle.
