

Source: KBhHIST201HolyRomanEmpire1500s KBhHIST201Kissinger

1 | Raison d'état

Each state depended on the other. The well being of the state justified whatever means were employed to further it. The national interest supplanted the medieval notion of a universal morality. — KBhHIST201Kissinger

A method of “sensible government” that promises to set aside personal ideological differences for the betterment of the country as a whole.

1.1 | Exhibit A: France!

KBhHIST201FrenchRichelieuAndRaisonDeEtat

1.2 | Failure and Overextension

CLAIM @ KBhHIST201Kissinger — too much power without morality is no good, for instance

1.2.1 | Exhibit B: Still France!

- Louis XIV, under the guidance of KBhHIST201FrenchRichelieuAndRaisonDeEtat, gone trigger happy on the expansion
- Ultimately, this is detrimental
 - When most states starts being fully rational and not at all moral, this becomes less fun
 - If no one else is expanding, a country will keep taking advantage of others, which... does not make you a lot of friends

Under Raison d'état, “The stronger would seek to dominate, and the weaker would resist by forming coalitions to augment their individual strengths”