1.2 | Possible topics

- Broa
- Bellicist theory is INCOMPLETE (duhn duhn dunnnnnn!)
  - Bellicist theory is about war, and discounts other forms of danger. Should be danger (and maybe some accompanying changes instead of war.
    - Three paragraphs, three examples where other forms of danger required state-making
    - End with some conclusion about the concept of models / theories?
  - To think about: what other things require state-making besides war-making?
  - Easy essay if I can get evidence
- How does Bellicist theory incorporate trade?
  - Is this managed by the state?
  - Only talks about interactions with other states if they are war.
  - Does trade require state-made organization?

==1AM jots!== ##### Bellicist theory is incomplete

- Other forms of danger besides war require state-making
  - Plauge
    - Look at ottoman orthodox vs european new ways
  - Ideological
    - Religion?
      - Religion is effective way to control people, but religion can get threatened.
  - Income / profit
    - Silver inflation from Spain and stuff

Bellicist theory: war making doesn't directly lead to statemaking. War making leads to need for statemaking which leads to statemaking or collapse.

This is an important distinction that must be made {becuaseeeeeeee}

it allows us to say things that threaten the state
